North Museum Call for Art: Hexapodian Days

The North Museum of Nature & Science in Lancaster invites artists to explore their relationship to the insect world, gardens, and our greater impact on biodiversity found within wild spaces more broadly. Diverse interpretations are encouraged for Hexapodian Days, an upcoming art exhibition. Eligible works include 2D works created within the last three years solely by the artist. Does your work look to the natural world and our place within it? Do you contemplate the future of biodiversity in our wild spaces? Consider submitting your work for this exhibition. Full details can be found here. The entry deadline is May 18.
